She weighs 404-tons, stands 16 feet tall, and can go 80 miles an hour. Steam locomotive no. 765 has been rocketing through the Midwest as a one-of-a-kind time machine and ambassador for Fort Wayne since being restored in 1979.

2012 is a year of celebration: The 765 is the result of 40 years of preservation and perseverance by the Fort Wayne Railroad Historical Society, which was founded in 1972.

On September 29th and 30th, explore one of the last operating steam locomotives in the world. Climb in the cab, blow the whistle, and get up close and personal with one of the largest operating steam locomotives in the world on September 29th and 30th. Enjoy caboose rides, tours, locomotive displays, and more and join us during our fall membership drive at the restoration shop of the Fort Wayne Railroad Historical Society in New Haven, Indiana.

Visitors will also get a first look at exclusive media featuring the 765 on the mainline with footage from the cab, trackside, and locomotive crew and be some of the first to purchase our brand new, 92-page fully illustrated book on the 765.
